

Baby BUNDLING

By Misty Bott

Now that I'm just 3 weeks away from my baby boy's arrival, I love folding all the soft, snuggly blankets that are patiently waiting to help me cuddle him close. Somewhere in the back of my mind, I realize that most of these beautiful blankies will end up covered in spit-up, poop or both, but for now, I can daydream of rocking him and ignore thoughts of the messy reality he'll bring into my life!

If you're looking for some adorable blankets for your own baby, eP's got a few favorites you'll want to check out. They're cute and durable, so they'll have a good chance of surviving baby mess and making it into your little one's toddler years.

Blankets

We love these blankets because they're unique, high quality... and comfy enough to become your baby's favorite lovey.

Cloud b: The Cloud b company specializes in sleep products. Their over-sized LullaWrap comes in either flannel or knit cotton and is the perfect way to welcome your newborn home from the hospital. Find it for $24 at www.Cloudb.com.

Pleasant Dreamers: You can be sure that all Pleasant Dreamers products are extra special because the company was started by a grandmother who wanted to make blankets for her granddaughter. This ultra-soft Little Dreamer blanket is made of cotton and satin, and you can find it for $30 at www.PleasantDreamers.com.

Baby in a Blanket: At 32" x 42", these blankets are large and padded enough to work great for baby's tummy time. They also come with a matching pillow for just $60 per set. Find them online at www.BabyInABlanket.com.
